MP3 gets rid of a lot of the information recorded in a song that our ears are not able to hear and then uses complex algorithms to reduce the file size.. The reason lossy formats are used over RAW is that RAW audio files are too large to travel over the internet at any great speed.. Instead, MP3 files use perceptual coding In other words, that means it removes the information that your ear doesn't notice thereby making the file smaller.. This then enables you to get hundreds of songs on to a CD and it also has opened up a new market over the internet - the download market as download times have been significantly reduced.
